Phase II Activation of the Heat Contingency Plan

Phase II of the Heat Contingency Plan will be activated from Sunday, 06/19/16 – Tuesday, 06/21/16. Due to forecasts of dangerous and excessive heat.

Per the National Weather Service (NWS):

- Two thirds of the country will be impacted by abnormally high temperatures into Monday and Tuesday of next week.
 - Peak heat will occur Sunday through Tuesday.
 - This weather event is uncharacteristic for this early in the season. This is a rare event, which occurs every 10-20 years.
 - This event will potentially bring all time record breaking temperatures to the Region. These temperatures will be extreme.
 - Temperatures could reach record levels even near the coast.
 - Inland valleys, deserts, and mountains will have intense heat at dangerous levels.
 - An Excessive Heat Warning will be issued; this product represents the highest level of urgency. This is a rarely used product. The Warning will be in effect at least until Tuesday and possibly longer.
 - Low humidity and intense heat will bring elevated fire danger, but there will not be a wind component.
 - No Red Flag Warnings are expected to be issued.
- A State Agency conference call facilitated by Cal OES will be conducted at 1100 hours Friday, 06/17/16.
 - The Emergency Services Coordinator (ESC) Territory Representatives for the Cal OES Southern Region Operational Areas (OA's) are reaching out to identify any special measures the counties may be taking in response to the excessive heat event.
 - Please see the attached county Cooling Centers for Southern Region.

Heat Impact Levels

More Information

Heat affects everyone differently. In order to better address heat risk and to provide a daily service with regard to preparing for heat events, the NWS has developed the experimental Heat Impacts Levels (HIL). The HIL is a forecast product which provides a quick view of heat risk potential over the upcoming seven days. The heat risk is portrayed in a numeric (0-4) and color (green/yellow/orange/red/magenta) scale which is similar in approach to the Air Quality Index (AQI) or the UV Index. In this way, it provides one value each day that indicates the approximate level of heat risk concern for any location along with identifying the groups who are most at risk. This product is supplementary to the official heat watch/warning/advisory program and is meant to provide continuously available heat risk guidance for those decision makers and heat sensitive populations who need to take actions at levels that may be below current heat product levels.

Category	Level	Meaning
Green	0	No Elevated Risk
Yellow	1	Low Risk for those extremely sensitive to heat
Orange	2	Moderate Risk for those who are sensitive to heat
Red	3	High Risk for much of the population, especially those who are heat sensitive and those without effective cooling
Magenta	4	Very High Risk for entire population due to long duration heat, with little to no relief overnight

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

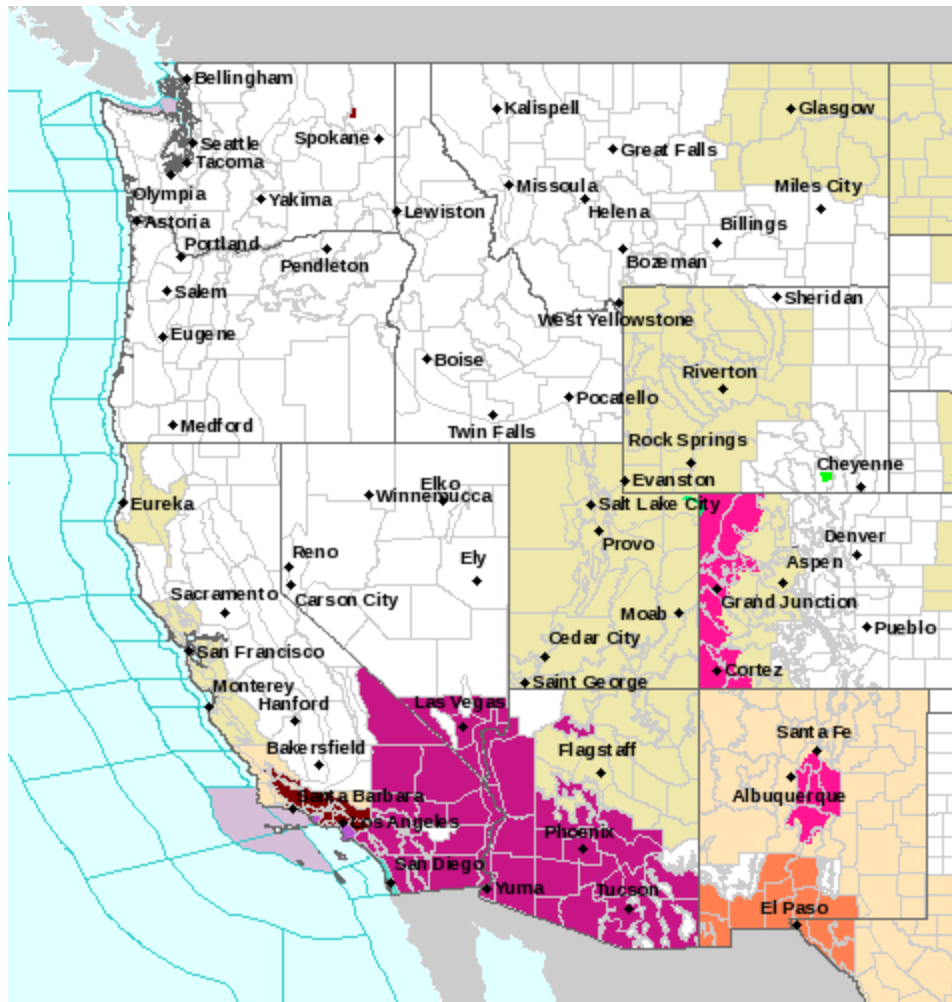

The unseasonably strong, cold and wet weather system will be with us for a few more days. More periods of cloudiness and showers are likely through Friday night for some areas. Isolated thunderstorms will continue to be possible, and they will likely be quite wet. One such storm near Redding Airport Wednesday delivered an inch to the gauge. A bit of snow had accumulated overnight down to around 5500 ft or so in the Cascades at least, and snow levels will likely rise some today to around 6500 ft or higher. Temperatures will vary based on cloud cover compared to yesterday. More cloudy areas will be somewhat cooler, more sunny areas somewhat warmer, but all areas will remain well below seasonal normals. Lighter winds are expected today, but another round of gusty west to southwest afternoon winds are expected to develop Friday. Relative Humidity (RH) will be high enough so those areas will be of lesser fire potential concern than recently. Once this cool weather system moves out of the area - which looks like Saturday - strong high pressure will quickly spread north across California from out of the desert southwest over the rest of weekend into early next week. there will be a very rapid rise in temperatures and drop in RH when that happens. Triple digit heat is expected to develop for the warmer inland areas early next week with potential for the warmest inland locations to reach highs around 108. RH will become low with many areas seeing overnight RH recovery only in the 30-45% range and afternoon values of 10-15% fairly widespread. Thunderstorms early next week appear unlikely at this time, but that situation will be watched closely for later next week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A Pacific trough over the West Coast will continue to bring northwest winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph to the South Coast of Santa Barbara and the Grapevine early this morning and northwest winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph to the desert passes through this evening. Temperatures will remain below normal today, with upper 50s and 60s in the mountains and mid 70s to mid 80s in the valleys. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 20% and 40% away from the deserts today. Strong high pressure currently over Mexico will move northward into Arizona and New Mexico Friday bringing a significant warming and drying trend to the region into early next week. Temperatures will be well over 100 degrees across the valleys and foothills by Sunday and the heat will be accompanied by widespread minimum humidity in the single digits and teens. Many locations will receive record heat Monday and Tuesday. Southeast flow aloft will bring a little increase in humidity along with a little cooler temperatures to the region next Wednesday and Thursday. Isolated afternoon thunderstorms may occur over the mountains and deserts of Southern California and the Sierra next Wednesday and Thursday.
